

Resources for Voters Who Have Questions

Having a Pro-life Voter Information Packet available for voters eliminates most questions but there can still be some such as the following:

I moved since the last election. Do I need to reregister?

The answer is Yes. If you have moved (changed your address) since the last election, you need to reregister.

Additionally, if you have recently turned 18 or are about to, you are eligible to register to vote.

Am I registered?¹

This information is found at voteinfo.net. The full URL is found below but going to that website, then clicking on Am I Registered, a form appears. Filling in that simple form lets a voter know their voting status.

I haven't received my ballot.

If the voter has moved since the last election is one of the reasons for not getting a ballot. If not, the usually it is just a delay in the mail. Give it 3 or 4 more days to see if it arrives. If it still hasn't arrived, call the registrar of voters. For our area that would be the Riverside County Registrar of Voters. 951 486 7200.

Who do I vote for?

The advice for Christians is to vote pro-life. However, sometimes, especially in the Primary Election, there are multiple candidates who say they are pro-life. This is always a tough call. Often times the choice comes down to who has endorsed them. The California Republican Assembly is usually a reliable pro-life source of endorsements. The California Pro-life Council is another pro-life source for candidate information.

Who are those that represent me?²

For a complete list of those who represent a particular address, go to voteinfo.net. Scroll down to Elected Officials/District Lookup. Clicking there brings up a form that, with just a little information, allows a voter to see the entire list of the elected officials for their address. The full link is below.
